Where should I store my kitchen appliances?

For larger appliances like stand mixers and slow cookers, deep drawers and lower cabinets are your best friends. Instead of letting these bulky kitchen appliances take up a lot of space on your kitchen countertop, store them in lower cabinet spaces or deep drawers. This not only frees up your counter but also helps keep your kitchen organized.

Can you put appliances in a kitchen cabinet?

If your kitchen or a nearby space, such as a dining room, boasts floor-to-ceiling cabinets, consider carving out a spot for small appliances. While upper open or glass-door cabinets can house pretty bowls and cake stands, use base cabinets to store appliances that aren't used daily, such as the slow cooker.

How do you store small appliances in a cabinet?

It's easy to access small appliances in a cabinet with a flip-up door. The door stays out of the way, so you can grab a cup of coffee or heat up some breakfast. Employ a nearby drawer to hold essentials like silverware, measuring spoons, and napkins. Inspired by old-fashioned rolltop desks, this small appliance storage features a rolling door.

Why should you choose a kitchen cabinet with shelves?

A carefully designed cabinet with shelves can provide sufficient space to keep all of your essentials where you can easily reach them. It can also provide space to store additional items, such as mugs for a hideaway coffee bar.

Why should you store your appliances well?

Storing your appliances well not only makes your kitchen look neater and more spacious, but it also enhances your efficiency in carrying out your daily kitchen tasks. An organized kitchen reduces the time and effort you spend searching for appliances, leading to a more enjoyable and stress-free cooking experience.

Should a kitchen appliance be stored high or out of the way?

If a kitchen appliance, such as a bread maker or juicer, only gets used a few times each year, it might be better off stored up high and out of the way. If your pantry has empty space on the top shelves, and you don't mind climbing a step stool to retrieve it come the holiday season, stick it there.
