

Europe can hardly prevent North Korea from co-operating with Russia and Iran. However, Brussels could create incentives for third countries, banks, and companies that - knowingly or not - are involved in North Korea's money laundering, weapons deals, and procurement activities for its arms industry.

This backgrounder examines the EU's autonomous sanctions on North Korea in the context of the wider sanctions regime. The recommendations aim to help strengthen the EU's influence on developments in North Korea and improve compliance with sanctions while reducing their humanitarian impact. The complex sanctions regime against North Korea

Eurus Energy develops, invests in and operates renewable energy projects worldwide, with a focus on onshore wind and photovoltaic projects. We have been expanding our clean energy portfolio ever since our first wind project in California's Mojave Desert in the late 1980s.

Last week, a delegation of South Korean intelligence and defense chiefs briefed the 32 NATO allies and our Indo-Pacific partners on the deployment of thousands of North Korean troops to Russia's Kursk region, with the intention of participating in ...

Official ties between the European Union and North Korea began in the years following the Cold War, precisely as the EU was developing its Common Foreign and Security Policy (CFSP).

With the 2004 and 2007 enlargements, the EU added Bulgaria, the Czech Republic, Poland, and Romania to its ranks. All the new member states, save Estonia, had ties with North Korea--dating back to the Soviet era for some members--or soon established diplomatic relations with Pyongyang.
