

Can Indonesia be part of the energy transition?

Indonesia can be part of the solution for the energy transition by leading the discussion and implementation and forging collaboration. McKinsey: What role can Indonesia play in fostering ecosystem development to advance energy security, the energy transition, and broader technology enablement goals in Southeast Asia and beyond?

Can Indonesia achieve net zero emissions by 2060?

Decarbonising its power system has been identified as a key enabler to achieve its pledge for net zero emissions by 2060, as coal power dominates its electricity mix. To support Indonesia's power sector decarbonisation efforts, the Just Energy Transition Partnership was established during a G20 summit in Bali, in November 2022.

Why is Indonesia rethinking its energy strategy?

The current geopolitical tension has made countries rethink their energy strategies, while volatile energy prices have driven inflation in food prices. Indonesia is projected to be among the top-five largest economies by 2045, with the population reaching approximately 324 million people.

Does Indonesia have a good solar system adequacy?

System adequacy has been assessed using a reserve margin metric, but this method is not the best fit for a system with a high contribution from solar and wind resources. Indonesia currently sets high reserve margin criteria, contributing to the overbuilding of power plants.

What does decarbonisation mean for Indonesia's energy system?

The decarbonisation of Indonesia's energy system involves a significant transformation. It implies shifting away from fossil fuels, which in 2021 accounted for 80% in the electricity mix, to higher shares of clean energy generation.

Can Indonesia and ASEAN collaborate more to unlock the green economy?

Indonesia has recognized the need for cooperation between ASEAN countries and the broader Indo-Pacific to unlock the green economy. McKinsey: Describe how Indonesia, ASEAN, and the broader Indo-Pacific can collaborate more to drive common growth in economic inclusiveness and advancement and social development.
