

ZESA's commitment to exploring battery energy storage and other innovative solutions offers a glimmer of hope amid Zimbabwe's ongoing energy crisis. However, the road ahead is fraught with challenges that require collaborative efforts from government, industry stakeholders, and citizens.

ZESA Holdings executive chairman Sydney Gata has said they are moving to install a utility scale battery energy storage system to minimise power cuts being experienced in the country. Addressing a Press conference yesterday, Gata said the current power cuts were due to hydrological issues being experienced at Kariba and a technical fault at Hwange.

To urgently address this dire situation, a combination of mini, small, medium, large, and exceptionally large distributed renewable solutions backed by battery storage could play a key role...

Distributed Power Africa (DPA), a subsidiary of mobile phone provider Econet Global, has over the last year begun installing solar panels and Tesla-supplied battery packs on 65 of its telecommunications towers across Zimbabwe. backup power when grid electricity is cut, said Divyajeet Mahajan, DPA's CEO.

In a groundbreaking move to address Zimbabwe's persistent power cuts, ZESA Holdings has announced the installation of a utility-scale battery energy storage system. This initiative, spearheaded by ZESA Holdings executive chairman Sydney Gata, aims to mitigate the impact of hydrological issues at Kariba and technical faults at Hwange, which have ...

As worsening drought slashes the country's hydropower production, creating lengthy power cuts, Zimbabwe's industries are beginning to turn to solar panels and battery storage systems to keep business humming.

Battery metal specialists say the drive for clean technology initiatives and off-grid power storage has created an enormous demand for lithium batteries and electric vehicles in recent years.
